I build B2C Service Business Websites That Actually Support the Business
Pakistan

Summary

I keep seeing the same thing. A business can be genuinely good, and its website can still do a poor job of showing that. It looks fine. Sometimes even expensive. But when you strip away the design, the important stuff is missing. The business is not clearly explained. The right questions are not answered. And the website ends up sitting there like it has a job title, but not the job. That is the part I care about. For the last 7 years, I have worked on B2C service business websites. I have reviewed 500+ of them. Delivered 200+ projects. Led website delivery for marketing agencies in this space. Over time, that has made one thing hard to ignore: most website problems are not really design problems. They are thinking problems. That is why I focus on better website standards. Clearer thinking. Better structure. Less guesswork. More useful websites. Not the usual website talk. Not "24/7 salesperson" stuff. Not pretty-for-the-sake-of-it. Just websites that actually do their job for the business. If that is interesting, follow along. If your website feels like it is underperforming, DM me with "website" and we will have a talk.
